PRESCOTT, Ark. (AP)—Police Chief C. G. Johnson has started proceedings to have a Kentucky man, now held in Texas, returned here for questioning in the pistol slaying of a Prescott city patrolman Sunday night.

Kenneth Dean Nicely, 20, of London, Ky., was critically wounded while resisting arrest Monday at Kingsville, Tex., and officers said he would be questioned at a Corpus Christi hospital as soon as his condition permitted.

At Little Rock, Arkansas State Police Capt. Alan Templeton said he had requested samples of bullets in a gun taken from Nicely to check against those found in the body of Officer Ed Verden and in the walls of the Prescott jail.

Verden was killed by bullets fired from a .45 caliber automatic. Texas police said Nicely possessed a similar weapon.

The Prescott policeman was found dead in the jail and Chief Johnson said he thought the officer was killed by someone he had just arrested.

Nicely has been charged with murder in the fatal shooting last Saturday of Tony Brown, a Kentucky auto salesman. Brown vanished while demonstrating a car and his body was found Monday on a dump near London.

Police Chief Tiny Candron of Kingsville said the motor and serial number of the car Nicely was driving were the same as on the car Brown was demonstrating to a prospective customer.

Candron said Nicely was shot after he drew a weapon on a Kingsville officer who had stopped him for speeding through a school zone.

Bayoneted Man Sues Government

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A farmer bayoneted during last fall's integration violence at Central High School sued the federal government for $5,000 in damages yesterday.

Paul C. Downs of Springdale, Ark., contended in his petition that his left upper arm was permanently disabled. His suit said the bayonet, wielded by an "undisciplined soldier," penetrated to the bone.

His action further charged that the soldier "negligently and ineptly" struck him.

The suit was filed by attorney Amis Guthridge, a segregationist leader in U. S. District Court here.

The incident occurred Sept. 24, 1957, when paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division employed bayonets to disperse white demonstrators protesting integration of racially torn Central High.

Guthridge said Downs was an army combat veteran of World War II and the Korean War.

State Agencies Asking for $160 Million

Girl 14, Bored by Routine, Kills Brother

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The State Comptroller's office yesterday began checking state agency budget requests for the 1959-60 biennium.

Approximately 96 agencies and departments are expected to ask about 160 million dollars for operations in the next two years. That figure is based on the 1957-58 biennium budget.

The Arkansas Legislative Council directed all state agencies not to ask for more money than had been granted by the 1957 general assembly.

The Comptroller's office will review and check budget requests, and the Legislative Council will begin hearings on the budgets in the last week of October.

The Council will make its recommendations to the Legislature in January.

One change has been made on budget forms, apparently aimed at state colleges and especially the University of Arkansas. It requires all agencies to submit line-item salary schedules.

A number of the institutions of higher learning had submitted salary budgets without designating job titles. The Council several weeks ago told all agencies to itemize job titles with their requests.

Governors Vote Out Race Mixing Resolution

Judge May Rule on Leasing Little Rock Schools Tomorrow

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—Southern governors opened their final session today amid reports that a resolution favoring integration had been turned down.

Reports circulated the Resolution Committee rejected Maryland Gov. Theodore McKeldin's resolution supporting the 14th amendment, which would in effect put the governors on record as favoring mixing races in classrooms.

Govs. Marvin Griffin of Georgia and Frank Clement of Tennessee said earlier they might submit other resolutions.

Griffin said McKeldin's resolution received only one vote. He said he thought his own might have a good chance to pass.

Griffin's resolution generally would "support the preservation of constitutional government and protect sovereignty of the several states against all federal encroachment," he said.

The Resolutions Committee continued in session it was not known whether a middle-ground resolution Clement said he might introduce was actually proposed.

Clement's proposal affirmed states' rights and also affirmed states' responsibilities.

The governors attended several committee meetings in the morning and went into a closed executive session at 12:30 p.m.

Traditionally, the governors do little more at these conferences than discuss routine matters and relax socially.

Last year, however, the Little Rock riots erupted while the conference was in session at Sea Island, Ga.

The governors hammered out a six-line resolution that pledged their effort to get federal troops out of Little Rock—troops sent to force court-ordered integration at Central High School.

So today, the matter of issuing a statement of some kind on the integration problem assumed paramount importance at the conference.

The governors have expressed no optimism that the Resolutions Committee could muster a majority to report any of the three proposals for a vote of the whole conference.

Judge May Rule on Leasing Little Rock Schools Tomorrow

Another U. S. Space Missile Just Falls Apart

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A U. S. District Judge said he probably would tell the Little Rock School Board tomorrow whether it can legally lease its four high school buildings to operate as private segregated schools.

Judge John E. Miller, Arkansas' only federal jurist at present, said at Fort Smith he would hold a hearing on the petition at 10 a.m. tomorrow. The hearing will be in Miller's home court at Fort Smith.

He said no other party had intervened in the case. "Only the school board has asked to be heard," he said.

In Lexington, Ky., Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus charged today that the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People had a hand in the latest school board action. He said the petition for federal court instruction had been prepared by Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel for the NAACP.

"I have it on good authority that Marshall prepared it, handed it to Daisy Bates (Arkansas president of the NAACP) who handed it to (School Supt.) Virgil Blossom who filed it in Federal Court," the governor asserted.

Mrs. Bates immediately replied: "This seems to be just another one of Gov. Faubus' frequent flights into the world of fantasy. We have no doubt that the Little Rock School Board has legal counsel fully competent to handle any of its legal affairs."

Blossom could not be reached for immediate comment.

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A federal court was asked yesterday to decide whether the Little Rock School Board would face contempt charges if it handed over the city's four high schools for operation on a private segregated basis.

In its petition, the board said it would be willing to lease the closed-down schools to a private corporation, if no contempt of court action resulted.

The board's request for federal court orders to go ahead with integration.

Gov. Orval E. Faubus private school plan also faces a possible challenge from the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Wiley A. Branton of Pine Bluff, attorney for the NAACP, said last night that he might file a petition concerning the private school plan in federal court this afternoon or tomorrow. He declined to give details.

Little Rock voters will decide in a referendum Saturday whether schools are to be integrated or segregated.

The board asked the court what it should do if voters approve segregation.

U. S. District Judge John R. Miller, the only federal judge in Arkansas at present, said at Fort Smith, Ark., last night that he had not heard about the board's petition officially but there was a possibility he could conduct a hearing on it tomorrow or Friday at Fort Smith.

He said he would reach a decision today on the hearing time. Presumably a court decision that the board couldn't lease the schools would nullify any approval of segregated schools in Saturday's referendum.

The board urged a quick ruling so Little Rock's 3,400 white and Negro high school students could get back into classes as soon as possible. At present, three television stations are donating time for supplementary visual courses daily.

The vote count in the referendum probably will be completed Saturday night but it could be some time next week before the winning side is known.

The Pikes County Board of Election Commissioners intends to let Gov. Faubus and Secretary of State C. G. Hall decide on the voting outcome if any doubt arises.

Faubus called the referendum under a new law which says a majority of the school district's qualified voters must approve integration before it goes into effect. There are no exact figures on the number of qualified voters in the district, although officials estimate the total at about 42,000.

If the votes favoring integration are far below 21,000, obviously the integration proposal would be defeated. But if the integration votes come close to 21,000 or 22,000, a dilemma could develop.

F. A. Henry, an election commissioner, said last night that the Board of Election Commissioners decided a finding on whether the integration proposal carries in the referendum didn't come at the board's line of duties.

He said the board hasn't tried to determine the number of qualified voters and has no plans to do so.

If the vote is close to the count, the board will have to wait until the vote is close to the count.

Another U. S. Space Missile Just Falls Apart

To File Recall Petitions by Weekend

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A Polaris test rocket exploded high in the sky shortly after launching today and rained huge pieces of debris back on the cape.

It was not known immediately if there were any casualties.

One section of the trim missile plunged back to its launching pad where it caused a violent explosion.

A second section plummeted back to earth a few miles south of the missile test center near Cocoa Beach. First reports said the shattered piece landed in the Anna River, which separates Cocoa and the mainland from the missile town of Cocoa Beach.

The distance from the launching site to where the missile came to rest sticking up in the river was about three miles.

Channel 4 in Pittsburgh was originally sought by five applicants. It was finally awarded to a combination of two of these, WCAR, Inc., and affiliate of the Hearst newspaper organization; and Television City Inc.

Expect Sentence to Commuted

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Sources close to Gov. James B. Folsom said today they expect him within the next few days to commute the death sentence of Jimmy Wilson to life imprisonment.

Wilson, Negro handyman, drew the death penalty for the $1.95 robbery of a white widow who testified he threatened her and attempted to rape her. Wilson admitted the robbery but denied any violence.

The State Supreme Court twice refused to overrule the lower court verdict.

In Alabama, robbery is punishable by death.

The governor, hospitalized with a minor illness, told The Associated Press he plans to send for Wilson and talk to him.

Wilson, scheduled to die in the electric chair Oct. 24, is in custody at Almore Prison Farm, about 150 miles south of Montgomery.

Group Award Woman Who Shot Preacher

CANTERSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A group of white citizens today mailed a cash contribution to Mrs. Izola Ware Curry, the Negro woman who stabbed integrationist Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Coal dealer, J. B. White Jr., a spokesman, said a substantial sum was sent to be used by her as needed and that more will follow.

Mrs. Curry is in Bellevue Hospital, New York, for mental observation. She claims Adrian G. in Emanuel County near Swainsboro, as her home town.

The white group labels itself the Citizens' Chapter of the Fund for Free League. White said it is the first chapter but others may be formed.

King, who is in a New York hospital, was stabbed in a Harlem department store Saturday as he autographed copies of his book "Stride Toward Freedom."

He is a minister at Montgomery, Ala., where he led a successful Negro boycott against segregated buses.

Dollars for L. R. Drive Underway

CAMILLA, Ga. (AP)—A three-day "Dollars for Little Rock" campaign to let residents of Arkansas know "we are behind them with more than just words," netted $475 here.

B. M. Archibald, 69, originator of the drive, said he had air mailed the money to Gov. Orval Faubus.

"It's our fight, the same as Little Rock's," said the southwest Georgia farmer. "We're not fighting the government, we're not fighting the Supreme Court, but if we can get around it (school integration) legally, we want to do it."

a much larger garrison banner always was run up in its place the minute the President arrived, and it had not been hoisted yet.

Time passed, and still no word the President was on his way.

The newsmen pondered the possibilities, but the delay wasn't disturbing. Apparently the President, for once, was coming to the office a bit later. Or maybe he had decided to skip the office and go directly to the golf course.

Not until midafternoon did they learn the real reason the garrison flag wasn't run up.

missioners will accept the total count of ballots cast in the referendum and certify them to Faubus and Hall for a ruling on which side won, he said.

The school board voted 4-1 to ask for instructions from the federal court on what to do about leasing the high schools.

Dismissing was Dr. Dale Alford who said last night he thought the action was premature.

The segregationist Mothers League of Central High School has been circulating petitions asking for an election to decide on the recall of all school board members except Dr. Alford. During the Little Rock integration controversy, Dr. Alford frequently has differed with board policies.

Mrs. Margaret Jackson, president of the Mothers League, said the organization had obtained the necessary 6,300 signatures on the petitions and planned to file them with the county clerk soon.

The president of the Arkansas State Labor Council and a Women's Emergency Committee to Open Our Schools today were attempting to line up votes for integration.

Odel Smith of Little Rock, president of the state AFL-CIO organization, said in a statement that the forthcoming referendum on segregation integration posed alternatives of expensive private schools or no schools at all.

Smith said most working people could not afford to send their children to private schools.

"Calling our schools 'private' in order to avoid abiding by a court decision won't work," he asserted.

Smith charged that Faubus and other backers of the private school plan know it won't prevent integration.

Van Buren Has a 'Spitting' Incident

VAN BUREN, Ark. (AP)—A reported spitting incident involving a Negro boy and a white boy yesterday resulted in the suspension of twin white youths from integration-troubled Van Buren High School.

A school official said Eugene and Gene Mathews, 15, were suspended indefinitely because they refused to return to class after the reported incident and used abusive language.

Eugene had reported to the principal's office that Nathaniel Norwood, 15-year-old Negro, spat on him as he rode past the Negro youth on a motorcycle.

Norwood denied the incident. He said he spat toward a gutter and the spittle "didn't even land on Mathews."

School Supt. Everett Kelley would not comment. Confirmation of the white boys' suspension came from a school official who declined to be identified.

The incident was the first reported since eight Negroes returned to the 622-pupil school Monday after a two-week absence that resulted from a protest demonstration by about 45 white students.

Norwood and the other Negroes resumed classes with assurance from U. S. District Judge John E. Miller that they could seek help in his court if further obstacles to their attendance arose.

The reported spitting incident involving Mathews and Norwood occurred as the youths were on their way home at noon for lunch. Norwood told newsmen that he would report to school officials today that a white boy spat on him from a car as he walked home after school yesterday.

The Negro youth said he had never had trouble with either of the Mathews boys before.

The twins confirmed that they refused to obey instructions from the school superintendent to return to class from the school yard.

Their mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Rockwell, told newsmen they talked to the superintendent and were told the boys could not return to school.

Rockwell, an engineer for a Van Buren ice company, said he might have to move from Van Buren to provide schooling for the twins and his son by a previous marriage, Dale Rockwell, who is in the same grade as the Mathews boys.

The Norwood youth was among 13 Negroes who entered Van Buren High this year for the second straight term of integrated classes. Four of the Negroes transferred after white students began a protest the first week of school. Another Negro did not return this week because of illness.

Last night, an organization representing youth groups of 25 Missionary Baptist churches in Arkansas and Oklahoma went on record here in support of Gov. Orval E. Faubus' integration stand. The group is affiliated with the American Baptist Assn.

AP&L Plant to Cost About $43 Million

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Arkansas Power & Light Co. today announced that its new electric steam generating plant on the Mississippi River near Helena would cost nearly 43 million dollars.

The Arkansas Public Service Commission last week officially approved AP&L's application for authority to construct and operate the plant.

The utility said the plant would be equipped with the largest generator of its type ever constructed, a 325,000-kilowatt turbine generator. The station is to have an ultimate capacity with four generating units of approximately 1,500,000 kilowatts.

The plant's boilers will be fired with natural gas—up to 75 million cubic feet a day—to be supplied under a 15-year contract with Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co.

The new facility will be designed and constructed by Ebasco Services, Inc. It is expected to be in operation by March, 1961.

Kiwanians Elect a New Governor

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)—J. Mack Poe of Pocahontas yesterday was elected governor of the Missouri-Arkansas District of Kiwanis International at the district convention here.

He succeeds Jasper W. Smith of Moberly, Mo.

The delegates named E. A. Collins of Cape Girardeau, Mo., as secretary and Joe Mueller of St. Louis as treasurer.

Twenty-two lieutenant-governors for various divisions in the district also were selected.

More than 700 Kiwanians and their wives attended the two-day meeting, which closed with the election of officers.

Believe they have been misled by enemies of free public education, he said. There are those who have always opposed free public education because it puts knowledge in the hands of the working people. These enemies have found a perfect weapon in the race issue.

Smith said destruction of the educational system would be unthinkable. He called on union members to support free public education by voting to keep the schools open.

The women's committee, comprised of about 300 persons, is urging a vote for integration as the only alternative to closed schools.

DOROTHY DIX

Wedding Plans Are Ready — Except for Mom's Okay

Dear Dorothy Dix:

Help! Help! Help! I am 17 years old and am going steady with a boy 19. He intends to give me an engagement ring at Christmas, and we hope to be married next summer. He has already talked to my folks and received their consent to have me settle with Chrysler with a piece of property for a house. In fact, his father is giving him a piece of property for a house. We've picked our bridal party, chosen the invitations and have prices on reception and pictures. Everything sounds swell, doesn't it? I guess you expect at least one hitch and we have it — my mother. I have not told her of our definite plans; only discussed vaguely. I don't think she'll go along with us. How can I explain to her that I'm ready for marriage? — Viola

Dear Viola: Only one way, tell her! Considering the fact that all the expenses you have so glibly discussed fall on your parents, they certainly should have a voice in your decisions. Mom will probably surprise you by her understanding and co-operation. Give her a chance to show it.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

Here are a few suggestions to pass on to readers (including a recent writer to your column) who are justifiably disgusted at guests who overstay what might have been a welcome visit. If they pay no attention to the suggestion that you must be getting ready for bed, excuse yourselves, one at a time, and get into your night clothes. If that doesn't work, get up and make a speech such as, "It's been charming having you here. Now it's time for me to hit the hay." all the time getting their hats and coats, assisting them out of their seats, and to the door. If your "guests" are insulted, it's good riddance — Edie

Dear Edie: These suggestions are swell, and there's no need to worry about the late-stayers getting insulted. These people have hides like elephants. Any other readers with workable ideas? Let's have them.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I'm employed as clerk in my brother's store. He doesn't believe in vacations. All summer he promised me a few days off but the store was always "too busy" to spare me. He tells me to just just one good reason why I should have a vacation. Can you suggest a couple? — Jill

Dear Jill: This is one of the disadvantages of working for relatives. You'd be much better off with strangers for employers. Now to the list. There are a hundred and one reasons why you should have your vacation. I can't think of a single one on the negative side. Hand him these, for starters. All work and no play makes Jill a dull girl. Doing the same thing every day will turn you into a machine, and you'll lose all interest in the work. A vacation is good for your health. Even the strongest of us get tired and need rest and recreation. Even a machine needs an occasional tuneup. People need a change of scenery and actively see, it's all in his best interest.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

What is a boy to do when he's desperately in love with a girl but never has a chance to tell her so? Her 12 year old brother hangs on to us like a leech from the minute I arrive until I leave. A disgust — Lester have can settle with Chrysler with a piece of property for a house.

Dear Lester: I believe bribery is the time honored method of dealing with little brothers. Give the kid the price of admission to the local movie — and hope it's a double bill.

Reuther said he might return to Chrysler for resumption of talks Thursday morning. He was asked if that meant the UAW was going to extend its noon deadline ultimatum or serve Chrysler with another deadline notice. "We have not made any such plans," he replied.

Reuther said he would join General Motors negotiations. Asked if his meant Chrysler is "now on the back burner," Reuther said it was.

The breakoff in the Chrysler-AW talks came as surprise. There had been numerous reports of a deal between the two companies.

Ford and the UAW reached a tentative agreement last Wednesday for a seven-hour strike affecting 98,000 Ford workers. GM and Chrysler subsequently offered to UAW three-year contracts worth $10 million to the Ford pact.

"Too," the boy said. Prosecutor Stuart Hoffman said boy told of witnessing two deaths. He said his father and the shotgun against the father's heads as they slept, and McMillan was found in his bed, 1950 auto about a quarter of mile from the home. Roberts, with state police and Sparta, said he offered no resistance.

Officers found a loaded .20-gauge shotgun in the car. A 12-gauge shotgun was found in an upper bedroom at death site.

McMillan and his wife were wed in 1954. They remarried in 1957, after divorcing in 1949. Recently, McMillan filed suit for separate maintenance.

Mrs. McMillan told police her husband broke through a screen Tuesday night and attacked. She said he ran to a neighbor to call for police help and left there until Robert arrived.

McMillan told police her husband was incensed over her move to Chicago with the dog.

Jeff Pigorsch said McMillan formally charged later.

Fullbright Receives Many Student Gifts

BRUSSELS (AP)—Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D-Ark.) was swamped with gifts last night at a Brussels banquet celebrating the tenth anniversary of student exchanges between Belgium and Luxembourg and the United States.

The senator, who gave his name to the law providing for U. S. foreign students exchanges, received:

A sculpture of a horse by a Luxembourg artist from the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

A colored flower vase from the Belgian government.

An ancient map of Luxembourg and an album of photographs of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg from the Luxembourg Fulbright alumni.

And a silver cigar box from the Belgian alumni.

Fulbright made an off-the-cuff speech.

He said, "Our great common enemy is ignorance and even more so, ignorance of one another. More people like you who have learned to understand each other might help make the United Nations a success for peace and a better world."

Citizens Group Hears Founder

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP)—The founder of the Citizens Council movement said here last night that the campaign launched by integrationists could only result in a "socialistic dictatorship."

Robert B. Patterson of Indianapolis, Miss., told the Pine Bluff Citizens Council that the racial struggle at Little Rock was inspired by motives "to destroy the public school system, to destroy the white race and to destroy the nation."

Patterson, executive secretary of the American Assn. of Citizens Councils, established the first segregationist council several years ago in his home town of Indianapolis.

"The Little Rock situation did not just happen," he said. "What has happened has taken about 50 years of organization."

Noting that the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People was founded in 1909, Patterson said the biggest problem facing segregationists is organization.

The scheduled principal speaker, Louisiana State Sen. W. M. Rainach, did not appear because of commitments in his own state.

Thinking to please him, the 21-year-old redhead slimmed down from a "barrage balloon" 47-35-54 to a shapely 38-26-38. The skirt she holds above gives some idea of her former girth. But now husband John complains, "I preferred her plump." The couple has agreed to a separation after three months of marriage.

THE STORY: Lane finds Deputy Sheriff Scharr, an old enemy, creeping up on him near the corral in Twenty Springs. Lane asks Scharr: "Trying to shoot me in the back again?"

Chapter XV

Scharr pushed his hands well away from the twin guns on his thighs. "I came after a horse. I didn't even know you were here."

"Some day," Lane said, "I'm going to catch you without that tin badge and give you what you're asking for."

Thick lower lip sagging from the weight of his imperial beard, Scharr stared malevolently. "Boss, you and Verdugo will take care of you Lane."

"When I leave this range, you'll be six feet under."

"On second thought," the deputy said, "you won't ever leave this range. It's to late now."

He kept staring, and began backing away. Putting several mustangs between himself and Lane, he turned around and stalked toward the gate.

Well, the bad blood between himself and Scharr was an old thing. Regardless of the range they rode, they would be enemies, but neither had a desire to hasten the showdown that would leave one or perhaps both of them dead.

Lane found the Four-Arrow work palling as the weeks passed. Mostly it was because he couldn't understand Irma.

"During the weeks of catching mustangs and breaking them to saddle, there'd been no further raids by the squatters; yet Lane personally was now more wary of the hoeman than ever. Not Sorenson had died of his wound, and he had died without telling his father the truth. When Dupey Brewer attempted to explain, the older Sorenson said savagely: "Don't talk to me about that gunman!" and stalked off.

Now Lane knew he faced a showdown with two men on this range who wanted his life—Louis Scharr and Thrus Sorenson.

Day by day the grass grew taller, the wind drier and the sunshine hotter, and each day that passed brought Irma's wedding one day closer, adding to Lane's discontent. Every day found him with the roundup wagon.

There were lots of mavericks. Lane was surprised at this; yet at the same time it was evidence that Irma was right about Murdo Mitchell. The Quarter-Circle M owner wasn't on the scheme to beat down the price of the neighboring ranch, because it took cowhand work to cripple a range by rustling its stock. Murdo wasn't guilty and neither were Jess Doucath and the Quarter-Circle M crew, as far as rustling was concerned, so Lane decided that Ellis Draper was playing a lone hand—with the moral support of Murdo Mitchell's wife.

Lane was riding and man on circle one morning, hazing a small bunch of longhorns ahead of him to the cutting grounds, when a rider topped out on a hogback south of him, signaling with uplifted sombrero. The rider was Joaquin Verdugo.

Verdugo was riding a pinto. Angling down the slope, he cantered toward Lane. He brought the horse to a trot and then to a walk saying, "Buenos dias, Senor Lane."

Lane said, "Howdy, Verdugo," and watched the Mexican with narrowed eyes.

Reining in the vaquero said, "You have seen the Senora Mitchell, no?"

Lane shook his head.

Verdugo squinted in the saddle, looking away. He seemed to be interested in a hawk skimming the timbered foothills of Lane's Steer Mountain. Finally he faced around and said, "I am not one to carry a grudge, senor."

"I'm not either."

"Then, senor," Verdugo put his gaze on the hilt of the weapon that showed against Lane's spotted vest—"do me the favor of returning my knife."

Without hesitation, Lane unbuckled his belt and removed the sheathed blade. He tossed both scabbard and knife to the vaquero. "Deputy Scharr almost got you hurt that night. You shouldn't have listened to him, Joaquin."

Verdugo's white teeth showed. "Es verdad, senor." Lifting his hand in salute, still showing his teeth, he reined his pinto around and raced back up the slope.

Verdugo had got his knife back and held onto his pride. Lane thought. At least no one had seen him begging Lane for the weapon.

Lane rode on down the draw, pushing ahead of him the longhorns that had stopped to tongue bunches of grass. Reaching the level ground presently, he choused the critters toward the cutting grounds near the center of the flat, adding more dust to that raised by the bunches ahead of him. When he'd thrown his gather in with the others, he headed for the wagon. It was right at noon, a blistering hot noon, with a pall of dust hanging over everything.

Verdugo had asked if Lane had seen Mrs. Mitchell Well, Karen, Lane assumed, was at the Four-Arrow ranch house, helping Irma get ready for her wedding, and as sister of the groom, helping serve as hostess to the guests

Western Electric Strike Authorized

NEW YORK (AP)—Members of the Communications Workers of America (CWA) were authorized today to strike in a contract dispute involving 15,400 Western Electric Co. installers in 44 states.

Joseph E. Dunne, the union's chief negotiator, said the union's Executive Board authorized the strike. The union's president, Joseph A. Beltrami, is empowered to set a time for the start of a strike.

Dunne said he did not know when a date would be set. Negotiations between the union and the company broke off last Friday at the end of a 30-day bargaining period. The talks were held under a reopening clause in a two-year contract that runs to Sept. 15, 1959. Discussed were wages, transfer allowances and vacations.

Current wage scales range from $1.45 to $2.92 hourly. Before negotiations collapsed, the union demands were an average increase of 13 cents an hour.

The company said its final proposal was an increase of five to eight cents hourly for installers and $1.50 to $2 weekly for job clerks.

Russian Farm Is Actually a Huge Factory

By BEVERLY DEEPE
Written for The Associated Press

They call it a farm. But it isn't. It is really a gigantic factory in which workers are continually hounded to meet American production standards.

More than 18,000 people work on a huge, 32,000-acre factory-farm east of Stalingrad that is listed as a member of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. student exchange program.

Their big objective, the director said, is to have each Russian produce more than the average individual American farmer.

"We have to look at the United States in this field and we have to take them on," he said. "By means of peaceful competition, we want to achieve the level of American agricultural production and then overtake this level."

"But," I asked, "what will you do with the surpluses after overtaking the U.S. farmer?"

The director laughed. "Ask the minister of agriculture," he replied.

Workers live in five haphazard little communities on the farm, mostly in four-room homes of wood or peeling stucco owned by the government. About 10 per cent live in state-owned apartment houses.

Kaskalen is one of the communities—a listless town where a white stucco Palace of Culture for night movies and dances is still under construction. There are no churches.

An Aqua Volga, resembling a 1935 Ford, rolled down the asphalt main street. But just outside the village, small donkey carts carried dusty men over dusty roads.

Women with smiling Oriental faces brought quart cans to the shops for their daily supply of milk.

The state owns the farm and pays the workers' wages. The farm meets the production quotas set by the state and sells any surplus to the state.

Each farmer has three quarters of an acre which the state lets him cultivate as he pleases. Each farmer also has permission to raise a few cattle.

Otherwise, they are the human tools who operate the state's tractors, combines and other machinery for the benefit of the state.

There are 3,500 unskilled workers who cultivate the corn, harvest the grain, hoe the 3,000 acres of garden crops and plant the sugar beets on this one farm. They also tend the dairy cows, goats, horses, pigs—and 300 camels.

The farm has more than 6,000 children who attend various schools and the agricultural institute.

Before leaving, the director took us to the four-room, crumbling stucco home of a farm mechanic described as "one of the professional people"—and his wife and three daughters.

We entered a reception room where a rubber plant filled about a fourth of the space. There was also a settee covered with white muslin, a chifforoni, a short-wave radio and a vase of artificial flowers.

A rubber doll sat on the card-board bed in the corner. The walls were decorated by a clock, a barometer and a painting of a watermelon done by the housewife.

The kitchen was about 9 by 15 feet. An aluminum pot was boiling on the single-burner electric hotplate. There was a white-washed iron stove about four feet high and an enamel sink two feet wide with a single cold water tap.

There was also a low cupboard with peeling wine-colored paint and a worn wine cloth. There were no windows.

The parents slept in a single-sized iron bed covered with a lace bedspread and needlepoint pillows. A foot-operated treadle-type sewing machine stood near the window. Embroidered samplers decorated the walls.

The children's room contained two small beds. Brown and blue bedspreads decorated the walls. And in the corner, I saw a broken mirror.
